

Legacy Heirs Productions Inc.

The Talk is an educational, engaging, end empowering performance brought to you by Legacy Heirs Productions. A virtuoso communicator, performer and facilitator, Dr. Sonny Kelly embodies over 20 characters, and thoughtfully ushers audiences into a safe space to have the courageous conversations we need to pursue healing and unity in our communities. This eclectic live experience weaves together interactive theater, a dynamic embodied performance, poetry, storytelling and a multi-media production with American history and literature.

The Talk is about returning to memories, re-examining history, and reckoning with an often confusing contemporary composite truth. At its core, The Talk is really about a father's profoundly abiding love for his children, his family, and his nation. This unforgettable experience begins to equip us all with the faith, hope, and love that we will need to unite and thrive in an increasingly divided world.

Dr. Kelly invites audience members (ages 10 and up) into a complicated, but loving, family where we are all encouraged to imagine new possibilities together!

The Objectives of The Talk

- To connect to audiences in a visceral way that will bring history to life while celebrating familial relationships, human dignity, and community.
- To challenge and shift audience members' perspectives, inciting more kind, equitable, and honest conversations and actions that unite larger communities.
- To affirm and encourage people who have felt marginalized or silenced to connect, communicate, and collaborate with others for stronger communities.

Legacy Heirs Productions Inc has conducted performances, lectures, and workshops for hundreds of satisfied clients like: GlaxoSmithKline, QIAGEN, The Association of Community Health Workers, Association of Maternal & Child Health Programs, HMA Community Strategies, RTI, Sentara Health, The USO, The Junior League, Cumberland County Arts Council, Duke University, Syracuse University, UNC Chapel Hill, UNC Greensboro, East Carolina University, Fayetteville State University, Georgia Tech University, St. Andrews University, Fayetteville Technical Community College, Sandhills Community College, Durham Technical Community College, The Levin Jewish Community Center, Cumberland County Schools, as well as numerous churches, community organizations, and K-12 schools across the nation.

The Talk

A One-Man Theatrical Experience
By Sonny Kelly

What The Talk offers audiences:

- Depth of inquiry, that links un(der)told history, personal narratives, and performance ethnography with our contemporary questions on race and representation, and resilience in the US.
- Combines interactive theater with vibrant storytelling and exquisite character acting for an overwhelmingly engaging and endearing experience.
- Profound emotional and physical resonance as a live performance piece, based in rigorous research, as well as critical autoethnography, that is mindfully, respectfully, and artfully done.
- Exposure to contemporary poetry and narratives by Sonny Kelly, Langston Hughes, Benjamin E. Mayes, W.E.B. DuBois, James Baldwin, Ta-Nehisi Coates, Gen. Robert E. Lee, and others.
- Expands our notions of equity, justice, and inclusion through embodied memory, for the sake of conflict resolution and intercultural reconciliation.
- Reverent reflection on U.S. history and contemporary race relations, with special attention paid to abiding challenges that disproportionately affect marginalized peoples and diverse communities.

REVIEWS

DO NOT MISS IT.

Kelly is nothing short of amazing!

~ Pamela Vesper and Kurt Benrud for Triangle Arts & Entertainment

Sonny perfectly balances an intellectual understanding of race theory leading to "the talk" with the emotional heartbreak of a parent having to tell his child that world will judge him based solely on the color of his skin. ~ Joseph Megel, Artist in Residence, UNC Chapel Hill Communication Department

I was blown away by your performance. Thank you for creating and performing such an important piece. ~ Christine Hinson Norris, Director of K-12 Outreach, Carolina Public Humanities

It was a pleasure to be with you all. What an amazing performance from Sonny and I though the energy in the room was just perfect for good discussion afterwards. ~ Chris Blue, Chief, Chapel Hill Police Department

Sonny's one-man dramatic interpretation of The Talk is a great exploration of what it means to be a black man in America. This well-staged and technically impressive production explores a remarkable range of complex issues--from personal and family history to the recent murders of black men by the police to the challenges of parenting a black son. Sonny also weaves in a great range of references to important writers from W.E.B. Dubois to Ta-Nehisi Coates; and he shifts among various voices (from his grandmother to Barack Obama) with impressive dramatic versatility. In most general terms, he shows how and why History shapes human lives every day and (by merging the layers of personal experience, black and white history in America, and the perspectives of major writers) he shows how the humanities enable us to engage with and respond to public and personal issues. Sonny gives us the "public humanities" in action... ~ Lloyd Kramer, PhD, Director of Carolina Public Humanities

I have lived all over the world, and many places in the US—The Talk truly inspired me to confront the frontier of my soul, and what my role should look like both through community advocacy, as well as a national level...I do not think that anything or anyone has touched my emotions the way you have through your creation of The Talk. Truly a wonderful experience, that calls to the soul to take action!" ~ Anne Parton, Public Policy Student, UNC Chapel Hill

I really enjoyed the play a lot and so did the others. Afterward, we went out to eat and we talked about the play and what it meant to us and for many of us it seemed that we watched a play that gave us insight on ourselves and the world around us. On a personal note, I was really touched. ~ Jacqui, 16-year-old Church Youth Group Member, Martin Street Baptist Church, Raleigh, NC

We just believe your performance needs to be seen by more and it so well connects to the work we do. ~ Tami Pfeifer, Executive Director, Boomerang Youth, Inc., Chapel Hill, NC
